June Shoot Notes

You could tell it was going to be another miserable hot day, even at daylight, as we met up at the diner for a hearty breakfast before going up to set targets. The heat had come early this year, and had put a stop to most outdoor activities. It was too hot to mow, too hot to work in the garden. You could even hardly fish when the humidity was so high it was hard to tell where the air ended and the creek began. It was going to be a rough day for 3D. HA was I wrong. We had so much fun that I hardly even noticed the heat. There were 47 other shooters that didn't mind a little mugginess. July will surely be hot too, but don't let that stop you. I don't even remember the temperature that day, but will always remember the fun.

Well, I'm waiting for it to cool off a little before I go out and mow. I think I'll see if Ronald wants to go over to the creek and shoot.
