June 21st Notes

You could tell by the thick green coat on the lake that summer at the ITBA was here. It wasn't too hot yet, though. We had a good time even though the targets were running small. Ha Ha. The food once again was very good, thanks to Dave and his better half.

Ronald had a surprise for everyone. He gave away neat rain jackets for all. Who says dumpster diving don't pay.

I was glad to hear that everyone from the Great Wet North survived the flooding. One thing to note was that the shoot was on the 21st of June. That's the longest day of the year. You know what that means boys. We've turned the corner. It won't be long before the snow's a flying. Well, it will be quite a while but at least we're going in the right direction. I think I'll go read John Nail's story "Fall". It don't hurt to dream.

(Thanks to Dennis for the shoot Commentary)
